Mr. FOSBURGH, Sr., says that he was awakened by an unusual flashing of light in the hall near his room door, which was open. It was then about 1:30 in the mornng, and he thinks the family had been in bed about an hour and a half. He got partly out of bed and was confronted by a masked man who held a pistol to his head, which Mr. FOSBURGH struck out of the intruder's hand. It rolled under the bed and was afterward found there-a 42-caliber builded Colt's revolver. Mr. Fossungn then had a terrible struggle with the burglar, during which one of his ribs was broken. He was struck over the head and badly bruised by a blow from some weapon, presumably a sandclub, in the hands of a second masked man who had come to the assistance of the first. Mrs. FOSBURGH, who had come to her husband's aid, was also badly beaten, but beyond severe bruises received no lasting injury.

Aroused by the struggle, Miss May Fos-BURGH started to go from her room into the hall. As she reached the door a man standing on the threshold of the spare room opposite fired two shots, one of which struck her in the heart, killing her instantly As she was sinking to the floor, her brother ROBERT, who was rushing through her room to reach the scene of the struggle, caught her in his arms. Then he, too, had a fierce struggle with one of the burglars and was struck on the head by a confederate as his father had been. One burglar rushed down the back stairs and escaped, two more burglars got out of a window to a veranda and so to the ground.

The City's Bables.

In the constant activity of metropolitan life too little account is apt to be taken of the touching proof of the kind-heartedass of the American people manifested during the last few days through the desire to adopt and provide for the homeless and forlorn little waifs whom ill fortune has placed in the care of the city. The announcement by the officers at Kandall's Island that the infants' hospital at that place contained a large number of healthy bables who would be given away for the isking has resulted in a demand for the tiny strangers which has astounded the heads of that institution. From all parts of this city and State, and, indeed, from many remote sections of the country, have come requests in answer to the announcement. Groups of women, of varying ages, eager to get possession of the little youngsters, have journeyed to the island, some of them searing the signs of luxury at home; others apparently in moderate circumstances, and ome, judging from all visible signs, with ut a scanty store of clothing and good food. only a small percentage of the appeals for aloptable bables could be satisfied, and dozens of expectant women returned home ad and disappointed. This makes a striking contrast with tales of abandenment and the recent developments in our police courts.
